Blaby District Community Safety Partnership Anti- Social Behaviour Pledge

Consequences of anti-social behaviour

The police and council have various powers to deal with anti-social behaviour.

Penalty notices

Fixed penalty notices and penalty notices for disorder are both one-off fines issued for anti-social behaviour. Fixed penalty notices generally deal with environmental offences such as litter, graffiti and dog fouling. Penalty notices for disorder are issued for more serious offences, such as throwing fireworks or being drunk and disorderly.

Warning and advice letters

Letters are sent out from the Council to individuals who have been involved in ASB. The intention of the letter is to advise of poor behaviour and to help the individual to recognise and rectify their behaviour.

Acceptable behaviour contracts(ABCs)

Together with a parent or guardian, a perpetrator will be asked to attend a meeting to see a police officer or a council officer. They will be asked to sign an ABC – a voluntary agreement listing a set of things they agree not to do any more. ABCs normally last for six months, but they may be extended if necessary. Failure to comply may result in an antisocial behaviour order.

Anti-social behaviour orders(ASBO's)

An ASBO is a legal court order that can restrict where a perpetrator can go, who they associate with and what they do. Breaching an ASBO is a criminal offence which can lead to up to five years in prison or a fine of up to £5,000 for adults and various penalties for young people.

People who continue to cause anti-social behaviour may even lose their home.
